

Coral gardening is a stopgap worth having

5 February, p 27

*From Arthur Dahl,
Geneva, Switzerland*

While Catherine Collins rightly highlights fossil fuel emissions and overfishing as the sources of coral reef destruction, rejecting coral gardening is like denying the usefulness of a bandage in protecting a wound while it heals, or cancer surgery while we lack a cure for the disease.

We need to save what we can of reef functioning in the hope that true solutions will come in time.

Did space-time not exist until we came along?

5 February, p 38

*From Ton Smit,
Utrecht, The Netherlands*

I can imagine that we humans influence space-time, but not that we create it, as you suggest in your new perspective on quantum reality. Who created space-time when humanity didn't exist?
